

Mariem Malouche
Senior Trade Economist, World Bank

Senior Economist at the World Bank International Trade Department, Poverty Reduction and Economic Management. She joined the World Bank in 2004 as an economist in the Middle East and North Africa region. Before joining the World Bank, Mariem Malouche obtained her PhD in International Economics from University Paris-Dauphine, France. Her areas of interest include trade policy, non-tariff measures, regional integration, export diversification and trade finance; She has professional experience in the MENA, SAR and AFR regions. She is co-editor of "Trade Finance during the great Trade Collapse," World Bank 2011, and "Non-Tariff Measures - A Fresh Look at Trade Policy's New Frontier," World Bank 2012.