

Michael Quinn
Managing Director, JPMorgan

Michael Quinn is a Managing Director of JPMorgan and is responsible for Product Management of the Traditional Trade products in the Global Trade business. In this capacity, Mike is responsible for ensuring that JPMorgan Chase's customers' needs are being met by the Trade capabilities and products offered. He is also responsible for the overall profitability of the Traditional trade business.

Mike has over 30 years experience in banking with more than half of that time specializing in Trade Finance. Mike has a diverse background in global businesses having managed sales, operations and technology in addition to his product management experiences. Mike has been with JPMorgan for over nine years and was previously with Citigroup. He is involved in numerous industry-wide initiatives and associations including his current role as the Chair of the US Council on International Business' Banking Committee representing the US at the ICC Banking Commission and serving on the USCIB's Executive Committee, a Director of BAFT-IFSA and a member of its Executive Committee and has served as a Director and Chair of the International Financial Services Association. Mike is currently co-chairing the BPO Education Group on behalf of the ICC Banking Commission. He has also authored articles in various trade and supply chain publications. Mike is a graduate of DePaul University in Chicago.